A good night for good skin

Skin continues its recovery and maintenance processes at night. Sleep is also important for healthy skin. This is where byDose began.

Skincare built on the idea that a good night's sleep leads to good skin.
That was the idea behind NIGHT NIGHT CREAM.

For a Good Night

The experience and atmosphere before bed

We considered both the feel left on the skin and the scent, so the last skincare step of the day would suit a restful night.

For a Good Skin

An environment for overnight skin recovery

We designed the moisture and barrier care to supply and retain hydration throughout the night.

Goodnight Sequence™
Designed to support skin recovery

From the experience before bed, through overnight hydration when reapplication is not possible, to how the skin feels the next morning.

For NIGHT NIGHT CREAM, we see this entire sequence as "night care."

PM 11:00

For the moment you drift off

Feel and scent designed for the moment you apply the cream before bed

AM 03:00

01. Texture

" LIGHT GEL-CREAM "

Designed for a lighter feel and a moisturized finish

Night creams often bring rich, heavy textures to mind. But a moisturized feel does not necessarily require a heavy formula.

NIGHT NIGHT CREAM has a moisture-rich gel-cream texture that spreads smoothly, aiming for a fresh finish with less shine.

" Sleep in the forest "

A "good scent" designed with comfort before bed in mind

「Aroma Wellness」
Beyond a pleasing scent—comfort before bed.

We believe a calm mind leads to "good sleep," and good sleep to "good skin." This belief shaped our approach to NIGHT NIGHT CREAM's fragrance, going beyond a pleasing scent to consider the state of mind before bed.

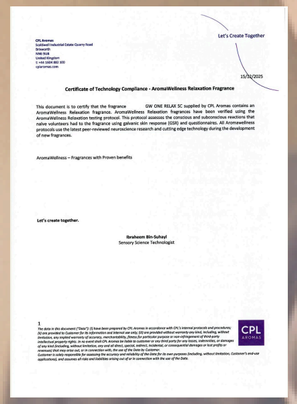

CPL Aromas' 「AromaWellness」is a fragrance research platform exploring the connection between scent and emotion. It uses a range of evaluation methods to examine people's behavioral and physiological responses to scent, as well as their subjective perceptions.

Ingredient design with the skin's recovery environment in mind

We combined ingredients to replenish and retain moisture, an important factor in skin recovery during sleep. We also added two fermented ingredients with the next morning's skin texture and condition in mind.

01 Hydration

Moisture. The starting point for skin recovery.

- 5 types of hyaluronic acid
- AQUAXYL™: 3 xylitol-based components

02 Barrier

A dual protective approach to retain moisture

- Ectoin
- 5 types of ceramides

03 Condition

Fermented ingredients selected with morning skin texture in mind

- Bifida ferment filtrate
- Galactomyces ferment filtrate

01 Hydration Moisture. The starting point for skin recovery.

5 types of hyaluronic acid

Hydration and a moisture-retaining film

Hyaluronic acid is a well-known moisturizing ingredient that attracts water molecules. We combined five structurally different forms of hyaluronic acid, ranging from its basic form to smaller fragments and network-like structures. We took their different properties into account in designing the formula to supply moisture and form a hydrating film on the skin's surface.

An environment for moisture movement and storage

We used AQUAXYL™, a moisturizing complex composed of xylitol, xylitylglucoside, and anhydroxylitol. Its properties support the movement and storage of water within the epidermis. While hyaluronic acid attracts and holds water molecules, AQUAXYL™ focuses on the environment in which moisture moves and is retained within the skin.

We combined these two ingredients in NIGHT NIGHT CREAM with two aims in mind: replenishing moisture and supporting an environment where it can move evenly and be retained.

※ The properties of AQUAXYL™ are based on the ingredient supplier's data, not test results for the finished NIGHT NIGHT CREAM product.

02 Barrier A dual protective approach to retain moisture

Ectoin 02 Barrier

Skin protection found in extreme environments

Ectoin is a substance produced for self-protection by certain microorganisms living in extreme environments, such as high salinity and dryness. It interacts with surrounding water molecules and has properties that stabilize the aqueous environment around proteins and cell membranes. It is used to help retain skin moisture and protect the barrier. Studies involving skin application of formulations containing ectoin* have also reported the potential for improved hydration and reduced water loss. We chose ectoin for a moisturizing approach that goes beyond simply providing moisture and also considers dryness and external environmental stress.

* Based on ingredient and formulation research, not test results for the finished NIGHT NIGHT CREAM product.

5 types of ceramides 02 Barrier

Replenishing skin barrier lipids

Ceramides are among the main lipids that fill the spaces between cells in the skin's outermost layer. We combined 5 types of ceramides with barrier care in mind: replenishing the lipids the skin barrier needs and reducing moisture loss.

While ectoin focuses on stabilizing and protecting the skin's moisture environment, ceramides focus on the lipids that make up the skin barrier. By combining the two, we aimed to create a moisturizing environment that helps retain the moisture supplied.

03 Condition Fermented ingredients selected with morning skin texture in mind

Bifida ferment filtrate

03 Condition

Moisture retention and skin conditioning

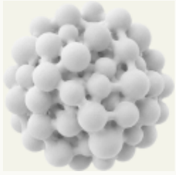

This filtrate is obtained through the fermentation of bifidobacteria. It contains water-soluble components from the fermentation process and is used for skin moisture retention and conditioning. Given these ingredient properties, we chose bifida ferment filtrate for NIGHT NIGHT CREAM with the condition of skin exposed to the outside environment throughout the day in mind.

Moisturizing care for softer, smoother skin

This filtrate is obtained through the fermentation of Galactomyces. It is used as a conditioning ingredient for skin moisturization and texture care. Research on formulations containing related ingredients has reported improvements in skin roughness. With this background in mind, we chose galactomyces ferment filtrate for NIGHT NIGHT CREAM as part of nighttime care designed to moisturize and soften skin that tends to become rough from dryness.

Alongside moisture and barrier care designed to replenish and retain hydration, we included two fermented ingredients for their conditioning properties, with the next morning's skin texture and condition in mind.

※ This describes the properties and research background of the fermented ingredients. Results for the ingredients and formulations used in the research are not presented as test results for the finished product.
